

To the anti-Romans

(18 May 2023)

Christophe Borsella

Since the time of Edward Gibbon, there has been a great deal of historical research concerning the main causes for the decline and fall of the Roman Empire. Over the last hundred and fifty years or so, an increasing amount of attention has been given to the miscegenation theory of Rome's demise. This theory posits that the rabid intermixing of Africans, Asiatics and Europeans (specifically Romans) was the principal cause for the fall of Rome. Indeed, it is one of the greatest causes of modern society's accelerating degeneration, but my chief issue with this argument is that it is simply too crude, if not altogether anachronistic for projecting a persistent trouble of the modern world onto antiquity – one that did not really “trouble” the ancients at all, since ethnos, nationhood and citizenship were all integrally one.

The other issue I have with the miscegenationist argument is that modern Italy – the very core of what was once ancient Rome – can in no way be classified as a multiracial society and nation. One would expect, after hearing the arguments of the miscegenationists that Italy should appear to be some kind of Mediterranean “Haiti,” or at the very least a kind of “mestizo” dumping ground as one can expect to find all throughout Central America. But this is not the case. Have the miscegenationists ever traveled to Italy – and not just to northern Italy, but all Italy? Have they observed the high propensity for red hair and freckles in the south-central Apennines and of blondism among the locals of Sicily (of all places)? Oh those “African” southerners, eh!

Nevertheless, the arguments of the miscegenationists persist. While I do agree that there was some degree of race-mixing throughout the late empire, I do not believe (like so many anti-Italians) that it was widespread in Italy. I have studied Roman antiquity since I was a child, and I have found no supporting evidence whatsoever for the commonly held belief that Italians – and southern Italians in particular – have any degree of negroid or non-White blood. In fact, quite the contrary. Any amount of research and comparative studies on the subject of race in Italy will show, via art history in particular (i.e., mosaics, paintings, murals, sculptures, statuary, etc.), that Italian physiognomy and general racial characteristics have not changed noticeably (if at all) in over 2500 years! Now compare this obvious visible reality – which connects modern Italy with the Italy of Dante, Pope Leo the Great, Caesar and the Tarquins – with the obvious reality on the ground (so to speak) affecting modern Europe north of the Alps. Just look at your modern Brits, Dutch, Danes and other formerly pure Nordic peoples – take a good look! The observations are clear; they are now almost entirely mongrelized. And it took just over a century or so to produce these abominable results.

Just look at the leader of today's Bnai-Brit-ish corporate entity known as the "UK" – a Sudra! Look at the rest of the Anglosphere and formerly Nordic world in general; it is totally overridden with negroes, Asians, Indians and so-called "indigenous" people who never constructed so much as a single paved road in the tens of thousands of years they are said to have occupied their current "homes." Contrast this with present-day Italy. One of the only pure WHITE nations left on earth. There, you have Giorgia Meloni, leader of Italy, a beautiful fascist Aryan woman! Now contrast her lovely aesthetic with your HOOKED NOSE ROYAL FAMILY! Furthermore, one will find Italians (both North and South) to be among the most racially conscious, healthy, hygienic and anti-multiracial people to be found anywhere on earth – surpassed in their "fanaticism" only by the Japanese... perhaps.

But I digress. If one wishes to find the true culprit of late Roman imperial decline and degeneracy, it is not the phantom-myth of a multiracial Roman society. No. The true culprit is the chief villain of the Ages. Here, I cite that one most unscrupulous TRIBE that controls all the earth's finances and that no one can name without undue reprisal; a TRIBE whose very name aptly rhymes with the word "POO."

As it is today, so it was in ancient times. This fifth column of desert-dwelling money-lenders came to power by bribe and scandal, commandeering Roman society and all the economic classes, whereby they used their newfound (or should I say new-bought) power and rogue influence to eventually seize the vast Roman treasury for themselves. Such epic feats of deception were steadily abetted by this parasitical tribe's RABBID financing of the barbarian invasions from beyond all four corners of what remained of the Imperium that was once Rome. From north, south, east and west, the unwashed barbarian masses came. And these dirty, smelly, illiterate wretches came armed, like so many Bolshevik peasants a century ago. And like the latter, they conquered. Though it took centuries for the parasitical plan to be carried out in full, the barbarians eventually swept away all traces of the Glory that was once Rome.

The above fifth column activities of an unchecked alien elite – and not some delusional “Nordicist” version of events depicting Italians as race-mixers – comprise the real reasons why old Rome fell.